Supporting Incident Investigation and Strengthening Safety Systems in Practice

How This Is Applied in Practice

This work focuses on identifying where incidents originate in real operations and ensuring root causes are fully understood, addressed, and prevented from recurring.

It builds on a practical approach used in high risk environments where failures must be understood and acted upon, not just documented.

What This Looks Like in Practice

- Investigating incidents to identify root causes
- Identifying gaps between procedures and on-site execution
- Understanding how failures occur in real operations
- Supporting leadership teams in safety-related decision making
- Strengthening accountability across teams and systems

How This Is Applied

1. Understanding the Incident

- Review of incident details, context, and contributing factors
- Identification of immediate and underlying causes
- Analysis of operational and system level influences

2. Identifying System Failures

- Gaps between policy and real world execution
- Breakdowns in supervision, communication, or processes

- Weaknesses in existing safety systems

3. Preventing Recurrence

- Clear and practical recommendations
- Alignment with operational realities
- Ensuring findings are applied and sustained over time

Where This Typically Applies

- After incidents or near misses
- During insurance or claims related reviews
- Following audit findings or compliance concerns
- When repeated incidents indicate deeper system issues

What Organisations Typically See

- Clear understanding of what caused the incident
- Identification of underlying system failures, not just immediate causes
- More effective implementation of corrective actions
- Reduced likelihood of repeat incidents

Operational and Business Impact

- Reduced risk exposure across operations
- Fewer repeat incidents and associated costs
- Stronger confidence during regulatory and insurance reviews
- Better alignment between safety systems and real operational practice

Why This Works

Because the focus is not on producing reports but on ensuring that incident findings are understood, applied, and sustained across operations.
